Why Is Apostille Important for International Marriages?

In the contemporary world, where countries have opened their borders, love and marriages determines no geographical boundaries. With increased cases of couples getting married overseas or when they get married in one country but settle in another after marriage, there is a great need to legalize the marriage certificate internationally.

Marriage certificate apostille process is one of the most effective ways of doing this especially to those countries that are members of the Hague Apostille Convention. Marriage certificate attestation UAE is a requirement to ensure that for countries who do not accept Apostille and do not follow Hague convention.

Apostille for marriage certificate is verification of documents that will enable the document to be accepted as legal in a foreign country. Members of the Hague Convention of 1961 use it in their countries. The signature, seal or stamp on the marriage certificate is attested by the apostille which makes it legally usable in other country.

An example is where, you got married in India and you are relocating to a country such as France, Germany or Australia your Indian marriage certificate must have the apostille that makes it inarguable and you are sure it will be recognized in the new country.

Apostille plays a Critical Role in International Marriages

- Marriage Legalized in a Foreign Country

Having appropriate apostille for marriage certificate, the marriage certificate can be accepted abroad by governments and organizations. When you want to apply for visa, spousal residency or joint ownership of property the marriage certificate apostille makes it legal.

- Marital Visa and Immigration

Embassies or consulates will need a marriage certificate that is legalized when it comes to applying a spousal visa. The apostille is not required in your country of destination but you are relocating to a country that has signed the Hague Convention so apostille electronically replaces its present method of legalizing documents in that country within its embassies and the process becomes faster and safer.

- Banking and Legal Dealings

In the case of a joint account, the purchase of property or inheritance rights, the cross-state institutions usually require confirmation of marriage authentication by the law. A marriage certificate that has marriage certificate apostille is used to this effect.

The UAE does not take part in Hague Convention and therefore marriage certificate apostille is not enough. You have to undergo the marriage certificate attestation UAE procedure which is composed of:

Home Country Attestation

- Notary or State/Regional Attestation
- Apostille or Attestation Ministry of External Affairs

Attestation by UAE Embassy in the home country

MOFA Attestation in UAE: After arriving in Dubai or any Emirate, an individual will have to have it stamped by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs UAE (MOFA UAE) in order to make it fully valid.

To the residents of the city of Dubai, this is usually called marriage certificate attestation Dubai and they can do this in the local notary houses or through authorised attestation service providers of attestation.

Marriage certificate can be apostilled by the help of which your marriage can be acknowledged by the country where you are going. Although marriage certificate apostille can be used to streamline the process in Hague Convention countries, countries such as the UAE have to go through marriage certificate attestation UAE process to arrive at MOFA verification. Whether it is marriage certificate apostille or marriage certificate attestation UAE, doing it accurately prevents legal challenges and hence your marriage will be accepted beyond the borders.